There are water and gas lines on the bridge which need to be removed first.

The project will take about 30 days or more.

Commissioner Dan Troy asked why the bridge could not just be closed off at both ends to save money on removal.

Gills said the bridge was unsafe and would need to come down at some point, but if the commissioners wished to assume responsibility for the maintenance and improvements, he would

DEPARTMENTAL REPORTS STORMWATER

Troy said, as expected, legislation left the House which stated the cost of moving county waterlines should be included in ODOT contracts, rather than being a county expense. However, ODOT was able to persuade the Senate to remove that language.

"The bill will go to Conference Committee, but it has to be enacted into law by April 1," Troy said. "The Conference Committee is supposed to settle the difference between the two Houses."

He said if utilities have lines that needed to be moved during an ODOT project those costs are included in the cost of the project. However, county governments must foot the bill to relocate their utility lines for ODOT projects, which county commissioners around the state feel is unfair.

panies which participated to find out how many people were hired.

COUNTY ADMINISTRATOR

Administrator Jason Boyd said he and the IT Department were reviewing the county website to determine how it can be improved. They are talking to department heads for their input.

He has someone contacting Lakeland Community College for information on its signage so the county can improve signage in the Administration Building so people can more easily find the departments they are seeking.

NEW BUSINESS

- Troy said the County Commissioners Association of Ohio was attempting to have changes made concerning how many voting machines were required per number of registered voters. Since so many people are making use of the opportunity to vote early, not so many people are voting on election days.

For that reason, they are hoping to have it changed from one machine for every 175 registered voters per precinct to one per every 250 voters in order to keep costs down when machines need to be replaced.

"This is part of our continuing examination of all of our county portfolio structures," said County Administrator Jason Boyd. Aufdush commented that the jail facilities were in need of repairs.

The county had received some proposals last year.
